Technology

Students in the Core Program have always been required to have internet access and instructor access via email. Though we will be in person in the fall, instructors have the option of continuing to use some of the on-line tools that we have used during the past year. This blend of in-person instruction with online tools creates a need for video and audio equipment. This will enable students to receive extra help in office hours, tune in on snow days, and interact with instructors in various ways. To this end, we are including two lists: equipment that is required and equipment that could enhance the online learning process for students.

Requirements for completing and turning in assignments

- Computer connected to the internet - used for word processing, internet browsing, and class time Zoom sessions. It should have at least 4 GB of System Memory (RAM)
- Scanning capability– some classes require scanning and uploading of completed assignments. Many printers have the capability to scan a document as a PDF. Cell phones with a scanning app can also be used to scan and send a document as a PDF.

Requirements for instructional help through Zoom

- Computer with internet access to Zoom sessions, or a tablet or phone that will run the Zoom app
- Webcam, microphone, and speakers (these are embedded in many computers, especially laptops)

Enhancements (these are not requirements)

- Earphones with a microphone to block out background noise when participating in online class sessions.
